ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY, WITH THE

PUNTI AND MANDARIN PROMOTION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

FOR COMPREHENSIVE and practical service, this work is well adapted. All the words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects of machinery, photography, telegraphy, and science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in Chinese. Each word is fully illustrated and explained, forming a complete and practical service for all the needs of the Chinese and English speaking community. The work is well adapted for all the needs of the Chinese and English speaking community.

Both the Chinese and English portions are given, the Chinese portion being arranged in the best principle hitherto attempted. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, and achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have hitherto characterized Chinese publications.

To illustrate the scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chinese Vocabulary contains about 15,000 Chinese characters, and nearly 10,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works on the Chinese language, this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

For practical purposes, the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect, the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves, as it explains subjects fully with which very few natives of them are perfectly acquainted. To natives residing in England and interested in the Chinese language, it is equally indispensable, and is well adapted for all the needs of the Chinese and English speaking community.
